Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Identify and describe events in the news in a range of social and work contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What are some ways you try to stay healthy?
- What would you recommend other people do to stay healthy?

Can Do Statements

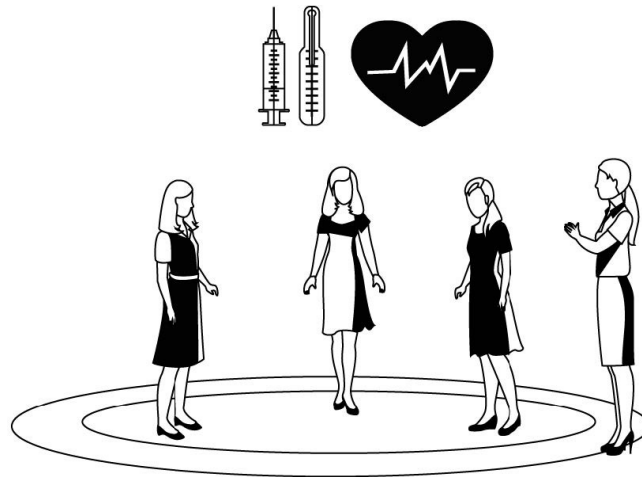

- I can talk about staying healthy.
- I can talk about someone's feelings and reactions.
- I can discuss how to deal with problems.

Let's Explore!

Sally and Vanessa chat about Sally's articles on health.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Sally: So, what did you think of my articles on health this month, Vanessa?
- Vanessa: Oh Sally, you're my favorite journalist. I learn so much when I read your stimulating articles.
- Sally: Which one did you like best?
- Vanessa: Everyone feels stress from time to time, so I think the article on humor and health was fascinating. I agree that it's very healthy to laugh.
- Sally: Which articles did you find less interesting?
- Vanessa: Well, usually I don't have problems sleeping. I never drink caffeinated beverages before going to bed, so I guess that article was a little disappointing for me. I'm not very fascinated by that topic.
- Sally: OK, that's fair enough. What did you think about acupuncture?
- Vanessa: I don't feel pain, so I don't want anyone to put needles in my body anytime soon. However, if I meet someone who is in pain, I could tell them about acupuncture.
- Sally: And what about the article on colors?
- Vanessa: Oh, that was great. My preferred sense is hearing. I would love to read more on personality if you have the opportunity to write another article.
- Sally: Good to know!

Let's Practice!

Extension Activity

Role-play a situation. You are giving health advice to a friend.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Look at the situations below.
- For each situation, prepare a role-play with a partner. Think of health-related key words that will help you to role-play.
- Complete the role-play. Remember to start with an introduction and end with a conclusion. You use the key words, but do not write the dialogue!
- Change roles and choose a different situation, or invent your own situation. You are now the person receiving health advice.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I review health-related words for a role-play.

I ask for advice in a role-play.

Situations

Your friend can't sleep. They feel stressed, so they drink coffee and play video games late at night.

Your friend is feeling a lot of pain in their back, and sometimes they have headaches.

Your friend is bored at work. They want to quit because the environment is so serious.

Target Words

- caffeinated (adjective): containing caffeine, like coffee, tea or soda
e.g. I never drink caffeinated drinks before going to bed.
- beverage (noun): drink
e.g. What beverages contain a lot of caffeine?
- needle (noun): instrument used to pierce through something, like material or skin
e.g. I don't want anyone to put needles in my body anytime soon.
- acupuncture (noun): traditional Chinese practice of placing needles in the body to relieve pain e.g. What do you think about acupuncture?
- to laugh (verb): to respond to a comical situation with a natural reaction of the core body
e.g. I agree that it's very healthy to laugh.
- sense (noun): means by which you obtain information about your environment (sight, hearing, touch, etc.)
e.g. My preferred sense is hearing.

Learning Points

Talking About Someone's Feelings and Reactions

You talk about feelings and reactions using adjectives.

Adjectives that end in -ed are used to describe how a person feels, like disappointed, interested, fascinated, surprised, bored, worried or tired.

Adjectives that end in -ing are used to describe things and situations, like disappointing, fascinating, distracting, distressing, boring, worrying or tiring.

These adjectives describe the effect something has on a person.

Examples:

- Which articles did you find less interesting?
- I guess that article was a little disappointing for me.
- I'm not very fascinated by that topic.

Learning Points

Conditional Sentences

You use the first conditional to talk about real possibilities in the present or the future. In that condition, something else may or will (not) happen.

The first conditional contains two clauses: the if (or when) clause and the Condition clause.

The two clauses are interchangeable in terms of their position in a sentence. When the if or when clause comes at the beginning of the sentence, you must use a comma after it. When it comes at the end of a sentence, no comma is necessary.

1st Clause	2nd Clause	Meaning
If I meet someone who is in pain,	I could tell them about acupuncture.	It's possible I meet someone who is in pain. In this condition: I could tell them about acupuncture.
I would love to read more on personality	if you have the opportunity to write another article.	It's possible you have the opportunity to write another article. In this condition: I would love to read more on personality.

Examples:

- If I meet someone who is in pain, I could tell them about acupuncture.
- I would love to read more on personality if you have the opportunity to write another article.
